As an internationally well-known ancient and young metropolis, Beijing, the great capital city of the People's Republic of China, is called Jing for short. It lies on the northwest of the Huabei Plain, around 150 kilometers to the northwest of Bohai Sea. Measuring over 16, 800 square kilometers, Beijing has a total population of approximately 13.819 million. To the north of the city is the Jundu Mountain, to the west the Xi Mountain and to the southeast of Beijing is the alluvial plain formed by the Yongding and Chaobai Rivers and slopes towards the Bohai Sea. About 62 % of the whole territory is mountainous land with a large variety of minerals and metals such as coals, iron and superior construction materials like granite and white marble.

Beijing Public Transportation During 2008 Olympic Games

Source: Date: 2008-9-12 By usa

Print

Beijing has tried many ways to incite people to commute by Public Transportation, a good, green, environment-friendly choice, to ease road congestion and improve air quality during the Olympics. The city's transportation department will open 34 bus routes to the Olympic venues, called Olympic special bus lines. And private cars are not allowed to enter the Olympic Venues; therefore it's better for visitors to choose the Public Transportation. Bus: The buses in Beijing can be divided into three types: the downtown buses (numbered within 900), special lines buses (including the buses whose number beginning with "Te", Yongtong Buses and Olympic special bus lines) and the "9" line suburb buses. Visitors should make it clear that some buses have "Partial Route", "Branch" or "Extend" after their numbers. In Beijing, fixed price at RMB 1 is charged for a public bus numbered within 500. Buses numbered between 500 and 900, the buses whose number beginning with "Te", Yongtong Buses and the "9" line suburb buses charge by distance, i.e. RMB 1 for a ride within 12 (including 12) kilometers, and RMB 0.5 is accumulated for every additional 5 kilometers. After getting on the bus, visitors should buy tickets from the busmen who all can speak daily English. It is also a good idea to buy a Public Transportation Card which charges a starting fare of 40 cents per trip. And passengers should check in when get on the bus and check out when get off the bus. Subway: There are 5 lines of subway in Beijing, including Line 1, Line 2, Line 5, Line 13, and Batong Line. It is also planned that Line 10 Part I and Airport line will be opened by 2008 the Olympic Games. The ticket price is RMB 2 (no discount for using Public Transportation Card). But the price of the Airport Line is not conformed. The transfer between each two lines is free of charge expect the Airport Line.
